Mr. Windeler replied to the first question that no golfer not a member of the club in the association could play in the association championship, and to the second that under the constitution and by-laws just adopted, no club outside the U.S. G.A. could be admitted to membership, and the national body had declined to admit a club without a course. In the latter statement Mr. Windeler has seemingly overlooked the election to U.S. G. Sesterners at American Bowling Congress Take Revenge for Opposition to the Loaded Ball-Eastern Men Also

Beaten in Fight Over Amendments. INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 26. The American. Bowling Congress met this morning for the purpose of electing officers and adopting a constitution. The session was marked by some acrimony as the Eastern delegates, led by Dr. Timm, Charles Ebbets and Joe Thum, made a determined fight against the amendment providing that each association shall pay annually $1 for every one of its clubs. The present dues are $2 for each association, regardless of the number of clubs. The amend-ment was adopted. Another amendment provides that each association shall have one delegate and one alternate and an additional delegate and alternate for each ten clubs in its membership.

Amendments were also adopted requiring the secretary and treasurer to give bonds, and also requiring the secretary to turn over to the treasurer all moneys received by him within five days of the date of receipt. The within five days of the date of receipt. The following amendment was adopted:

"The congress through its Executive Committee shall organize and adopt in and for each city or town of the United States, one central association, as subsidiary and auxiliary to this organization, except that in the city of New York such organization may be organized or adopted by boroughs of one or more borough each as may be determined by the Executive Committee of the congress.

The election of officers led to further complaints from the East when Mr. Ebbets wanted to name John R. Price of Buffalo for president. The New York people failed to send a delegation on account of the disture over the loaded ball and the Nominating Committee "got square" by ignoring the Empire State on the ticket. Athlette Field for Columbia. After much uncertainty and discussion i cas intimated at Columbia yesterday by an fficial statement that provision for athcties on South Field will be made for many years to come. Some time ago the trustees reported that they had received assurances rom prominent citizens that the $2,000,000 necessary for the purchase of the ground October, when the option to buy expires. Acting upon these assurances President Nicholas Murray Butler suggested to Prof. Alfred D. F. Harrin of the department of architecture that a competition be instituted

Alfred D. F. Harrlin of the department of architecture that a competition be instituted among the advanced students in the department for the best design of the use to be made of South Field. The competition was placed in charge of H. F. Hornbostel, lecturer in architectural design, who, it is said, gave instructions that provision for an athletic field should be made in every drawing. The completed designs are now on exhibition in Havemeyer Hall and an athletic field appears on all.

An official statement from the presidents office dealing with the competition has this to say about South Field and athletics:

"The central part of South Field is supposed to be reserved as an open park specially laid out for athletic exercises. In some designs the exercise-field is set with its axis east and west, in others, north and south. Some of the fields are square, many oblong, and a number have oval ends. In some grass and tree-planted courts intervene between the exercise-field and four dormitories which have been provided for; in others, open spaces exist between the buildings and the streets. Some designs provide ample space for spectators of the games, in others the playground is cramped. In some designs the property is level, being embanked with reference to list street, or depressed with reference to list street, or partly embanked and partly depressed, and there is every possible variety of handling of the accessories of paths, steps, trees, terracing, grass and flowers. There will thus be retained an open vista and approached, as it were, sideways, that is, through lists street."
